Designs for the drinks industry

These designs were produced for a company called the European Marketing Agency who had several clients in the drinks industry including Allied Domecq (Courvoisier, Tia Maria, Ballantines, Beefeater and Teachers), Bacardi and Marie Brizard.

My main focus for two years was on the brand Courvoiser. I was tasked with making Courvoisier the most ‘French’ of all cognacs – and introducing the brand to the Asian market.

I was also heavily involved in the launch of Bacardi 8, the first aged rum.

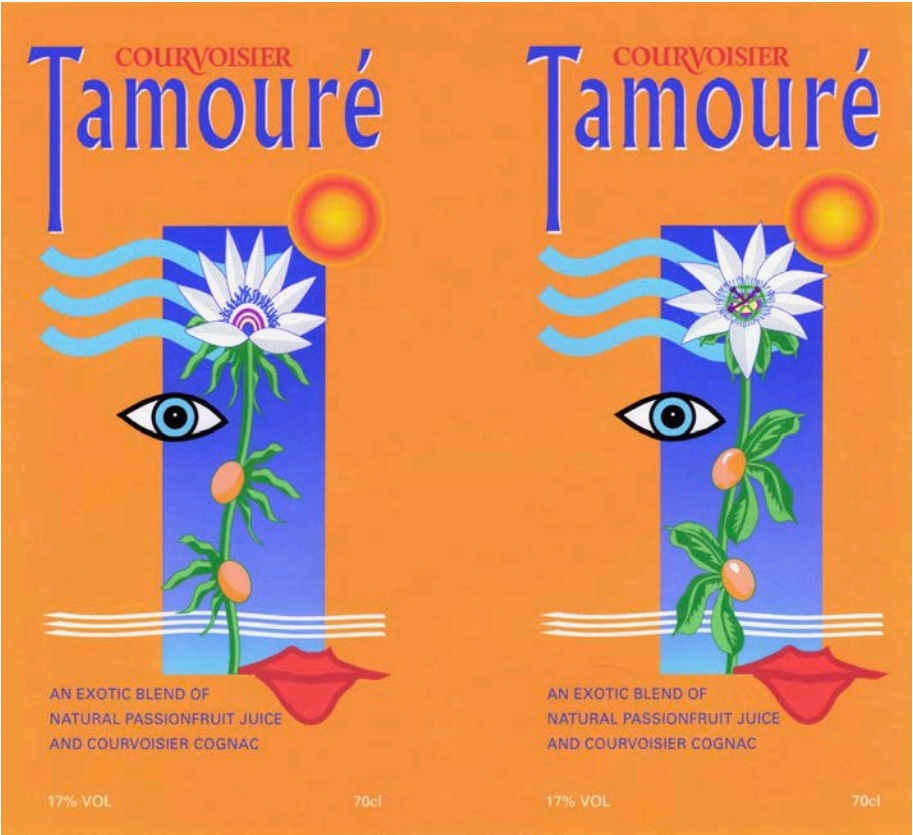

Many of the designs are visuals presented to the client for consideration and testing, some designs went through to production. I’ve marked those products that made it to market.

All the images have been scanned from ink jet prints – so the clarity and vibrancy of the original digital files have been lost.

These were all concepts – and I was told very strictly to only use elements in the brand guidelines and not to introduce anything new. The concepts were all rejected as they went with another idea from an agency who completely ignored the brief and went with something new!

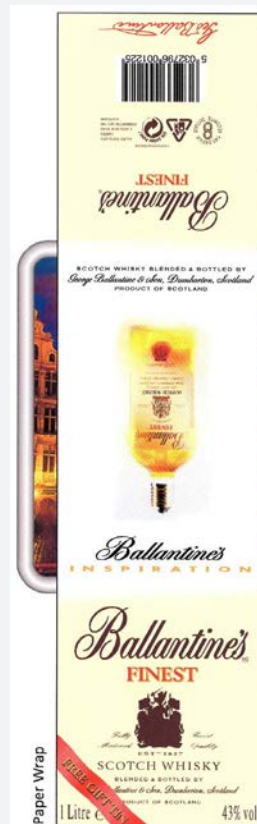

Ballantines

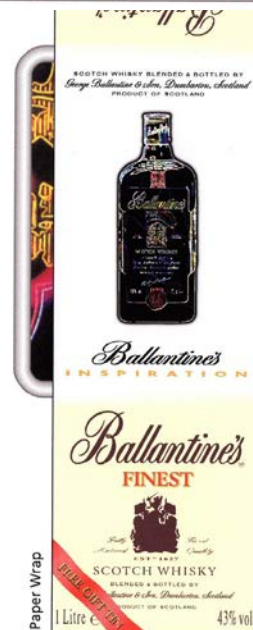

GIFT TINS & BAG

A series idea for gift tins representing various countries – for Airport Sales.

Ballantines whisky is a square bottle, because in the days of American prohibition, a short neck would have less risk of breaking when smuggled out of Detroit in cars and motor parts in tins.

ADVERTISING CONCEPTS

Marrie Brizzard produces a comprehensive range of flavours for cocktails – I explored some concepts which produced a photoshoot and advertising campaign.

Bacardi 8

PRODUCT DESIGN AND LAUNCH

Bacardi 8 was the first commercially produced aged rum. It was launched at the Cannes Festival with the master-blender singing and his wife playing the drums in the Carlton Hotel. We also had a beach area where we had a party, only accessible via a slide from the promenade.

Whilst the family is based in Miami, they were originally from Cuba - and we focussed very much on Cuban music and culture.

Display Stands

FOR HEATHROW AIRPORT DUTY FREE

I was asked to design numerous display stands with gimmicks to catch people's eye – with moving parts or flashing lights. Some were around the theme of 'Spirit of Adventure' – which we used as the title of the World Duty Free Festival in Cannes in France where we launched new products, including Bacardi 8.
